MAC TO BASE!!
THERE IS NO LIFE
ON MARS.

YOU'RE ON A

YOUR MISSION:

Explore Mars and find a place where space settlers can live. But be careful, mysterious life forms have been picked up on the scanner. These life forms fly ships that turn into powerful mech suits. They search for biodium meteorites, a secret source of energy. They use their advanced technology to protect their planet. Good luck on your encounter.

THE CREW FOR YOUR MISSION...

DOC

Doc is a super space scientist. He designed the Solar Explorer that is going to Mars.

MAC

Mac is Earth's best space pilot. He has spent more time in space than any other human. Mac is also the mission's top mechanic.

7315 SOLAR EXPLORER

The Solar Explorer is the first spaceship built by humans that can travel across the solar system. But the big ship is more than a spaceship. On Mars, the body of the ship becomes a portable lab for the explorers.

TRANSFORM SHIP INTO MINI-EXPLORER AND LAND LAB.

7312 T3-TRIKE

The T3-Trike is the explorers' surface rover. Its bubble canopy gives explorers an excellent view of the red planet.

MISSION TO MARS...

BB

Ever since he was a baby, BB was interested in space. BB won a worldwide space explorer contest and the prize was a trip to Mars!

ASSISTANT

The crew's all-around helper is eager to assist in any job. He loves to pick up Martian rocks for his rock collection.

IDENTIFIED LIFE FORMS...

RIEGEL (say re-gull)

Riegel is the royal ruler of the red planet. Just like the star he is named for, Riegel is a giant star of the Martians. Riegel is a tough leader who keeps everyone digging for biodium.

CASSIOPEIA

(say cass-ee-o-pe-a) Cassie, Riegel's daughter, is one of the brightest young Martians. She is already an expert on tube technology and robot transformation.

ANTARES

(say an-tar-ease) Antares is the Martian inventor who created the Aero Tube Hanger. When his inventions don't go well, Antares gets angry. His face turns as red as Mars.

ALTAR (say all-tar)

Altair is one of the younger Martians. He listens to strange music and drives his RP Cruiser too fast. Even so, he is one of the best pilots on Mars. His name, like the star Altair, means "The Flying Eagle."

7314 RECON-MECH RP

This big, red mech really works hard. It uses its flexible arms to blast open meteorites and pick up biodium crystals. Transforms into a low-altitude spacecraft.

7317 AERO TUBE HANGAR

All Martians like hanging around the Aero Tube Hangar. In the hangar, biodium meteorites are unloaded and opened. The hangar is always filled with working robots and flying spaceships.

7313 RED PLANET PROTECTOR

Nothing gets past the Red Planet Protector. It is loaded with lasers, sensors, and secret surprises. When fully armed, it is an awesome sight. Transforms into different shapes when danger threatens.

ING PLANET

Want to be a space explorer like Mac, Doc, and BB? If you have a few years to spare, you could be the first person on Mars. A trip to Mars and back could take 3 years. Even though Mars is Earth's next door neighbor, it's 35 million miles away! You have time to get ready for the trip, though, because it will be a while before humans reach Mars. Scientists are still working on ways to keep astronauts safe and healthy on long space trips. But NASA wants to learn as much as it can about Mars, so it has come up with other ways to explore the red planet.

The adventure begins in 2001. That's when the next spacecraft is set to blast off on its way to Mars. The mission is called 2001 Mars Odyssey, and the craft is the Mars Surveyor 2001 Orbiter. Once it reaches orbit around Mars, the ship will start studying the planet's surface. Then in 2003, NASA will send two surface rovers to Mars. The size of a golf cart, each rover will roll over the planet like a T-3 Trike. The robot rovers will send pictures back to Earth and study rocks.

BRICK PAPER

Ever wonder how professional LEGO® model builders get all those great curves and shapes into their creations? The trick is something called brick paper. Brick paper is a special kind of graph paper designed to help plan LEGO models.

Now you can get brick paper just like the LEGO model builders use! Visit the LEGO web site at www.LEGO.com/graph.

Brick paper is divided into segments that are exactly the size of LEGO plates. You can see a sample of a Stormtrooper face done on brick paper on this page. If you look at the brick paper closely, you'll notice that every third line is a little bit darker than the other two. When three plates are stacked together, they equal the size of one LEGO brick.

Try building the Stormtrooper face based on the brick outline. All you need are black, gray and white elements from your collection. When you're done, you'll have a model sure to keep the Rebels out of your room!

VISION COMMAND

CREATE ROBOTS THAT SEE

The Briefing

Every good secret agent needs a briefing to understand the mission. With Vision Command, that means programming your Vision Command system the way you want. Set up your LEGO CAM to spot movement, changes in light, even particular colors - then decide how you want it to react. Step-by-step instructions make it easy to program, and LEGO pieces let you build a base for your LEGO CAM.

The Action

Your LEGO CAM is ready to look for intruders - and you choose what you want to happen when it spots one. Your LEGO CAM can:

- Snap a picture of the intruder.
- Capture the action in your room on video.
- Sound an alarm, play a sound effect, or even play music!

When you get home, you can play the video or review the photos, because they're saved right on your computer. You'll have all the evidence you need to crack the case!

The Wrap-Up

With the mystery solved, you and Vision Command can relax. Use the LEGO CAM to snap photos of yourself and send them in e-mail to your friends. Make a music synthesizer that plays with a wave of your hand. And if you have the Robotics Invention System (sold separately), you can even integrate Vision Command with your creations and build robots that see!

Now you can keep track of what's going on in your room, even when you're not there! Vision Command's LEGO CAM PC camera and special software make it as cool as a superspy, and twice as effective at guarding your room. Motion, light, and color sensors mean your camera can react to what it sees, and take fast action! It's easy to put Vision Command on the case.

Integrate your Robotics Invention System with Vision Command to create robots that see!
